THE PINE TREE GROVE

By W. H. Lord

As I walk among the pine trees;
I surely sense the presence of
Surrounded by an assembly,
Of people just like me;
Oh, the foliage of forest
Has a place for you and me;
All the pleasantness and sweetness,
And the beauty for us,
When the sun shines brightly,
No place on earth is sweeter,
Than by the Pine Tree Grove to lie.
Yes, the background scene is pleasant,
And the pasture fields are green;
But there's no more healthy dwelling
Than the Pine Tree Grove for me.
You may sail the pleasant river,
With canoes of fair design;
And gather nut and berries
Of the ever swaying pine.
Yet you miss a great serenity,
Marked by solitude and peace,
For you failed to visit nature,
In the leisure of the day.
Now, if your leisure cometh
In the sunshine of the day;
Just walk among the pine trees,
And hear sweet nature play.

OUR HEROES

We mourn for our heroes who sleep overseas.
To pass through the blood and horrors of war,
Where they freely gave their all,
And those who came back maimed of body and soul.
Our heroes, living today,
Let us not forget we owe them a debt,
A life-time debt of prayer.
They are here with us, broken lives to mend,
A place to find in the world;
May they never lose faith in us whom they served,
When they sleep the sleep of the unconquered!

NORWAY VICINITY

Fred Kelley of Richmond was the week end guest of Philip Deane and family. Mrs. Florence Carver, Brown Street, has returned from a visit with her son, Mr. Carver, in Portland. She also spent several days with friends in Lewiston.

Wiley Eucampment I. O. O. F. of Norway, announced the meeting of South Paris, and will hold their district meeting in I. O. O. F. Hall, Norway, Friday evening, May 24. Supper at 6:30.

A repairing job on the cement at the junction of Main and Bridge Streets is badly needed. There are some places where the cement is broken out to a depth of some inches and a length of several feet with projecting edges and practically every car which goes up or down Bridge street or turns around the silent policeman bounces into these holes and splashes through the puddles, for there is always water in them—pedestrians nearby take the splashing as well as whatever is in range.

A patching of cement now would save further gouging and be a help for those turning around the silent policeman. The "Mutt and Jeff" show at Norway Opera House, Monday evening, was a strong attraction, especially to scores of children in the front rows. Bud Fisher's immortal characters of the comic strip danced and pranced in the flesh, giving a line of comedy in the shape of wise cracks and knock-about predicaments. The happy pair had the support of a leading man and a dozen chorines who sported in colorful costumes and changed for every ensemble number. The girls were the brunette type, with good singing voices and nimble feet, one acrobatic dancer was unusually clever. A female impersonator with three voices was one of the hits and had some of the best heads going.
